Monster Game Character Guide

Names powers weaknesses and matchups

Five giant monsters form a playable roster with different ways to fight. This guide records their names, visual identities, strengths, weaknesses, signature moves, and favorable matchups. The gameplay rules are proposals to tune through playtesting.

Roster at a glance

Monster	Combat role	Signature move
KORVAK	Heavy close-range bruiser	Magma Quake
VELUMORA	Fast aerial attacker	Thunder Vortex
ORUVEX	Ranged fighter with water cannons	Tidal Siege
CANOPYX	Defender with roots and regeneration	Forest Lock
PRISMOR	Agile melee fighter and trickster	Prism Reversal

KORVAK

The Walking Volcano

Visual identity: A six-legged volcanic beast with charcoal basalt armor, glowing orange cracks, and large geothermal shoulder vents.

Combat role: Heavy close-range bruiser.

Strengths

- Highest armor and close-range damage in the roster.
- Heavy attacks resist interruption.
- Ground slams damage several nearby enemies.

Weaknesses

- Slow movement and turning make attacks easier to dodge.
- Water attacks temporarily cool and crack its armor.
- Glowing shoulder vents become vulnerable after a powerful attack.

Signature move

Magma Quake. Slams its front limbs down, sending three expanding shockwaves across the ground.

Favorable matchup: CANOPYX. Heat burns its defenses and interrupts healing.

Counter to watch: ORUVEX.

VELUMORA

The Storm Hunter

Visual identity: A purple and silver flying predator with broad curled crescent wings, electric membranes, and three long ribbon tails.

Combat role: Fast aerial attacker.

Strengths

- Fastest monster in the roster.
- Can fly over ground hazards and attack from above.
- Fires lightning at distant enemies.

Weaknesses

- Low health and fragile wing membranes.
- Powerful water jets can briefly force it to land.
- Must land periodically to recover flight stamina.

Signature move

Thunder Vortex. Creates a moving cyclone that pulls enemies toward its center before releasing a lightning strike.

Favorable matchup: ORUVEX. Electricity exploits its exposed pressure sacs.

Counter to watch: PRISMOR.

ORUVEX

The Tidebreaker

Visual identity: A pearl-white and turquoise ocean creature with three legs, coral-pink gills, visible pressure sacs, and two siphon arms.

Combat role: Ranged fighter with water cannons.

Strengths

- Longest sustained attack range in the roster.
- Water cannons push opponents away, interrupt charges, and cool heated armor.
- Its three-legged stance resists knockback.

Weaknesses

- Slow sideways movement.
- Glowing pressure sacs are vulnerable to electricity.
- An empty water reserve creates a refill window when its cannons cannot fire.

Signature move

Tidal Siege. Anchors all three feet and unleashes two powerful water streams. It cannot move while firing.

Favorable matchup: KORVAK. Water weakens its armor and stops its charges.

Counter to watch: VELUMORA.

CANOPYX

The Living Fortress

Visual identity: A mobile forest guardian with a seed-pod body, a glowing golden core, a broad leaf canopy, and five articulated root limbs.

Combat role: Defender with roots and regeneration.

Strengths

- Grabs and immobilizes enemies with roots.
- Creates wooden barriers.
- Slowly regenerates health after avoiding damage for several seconds.

Weaknesses

- Fire burns away its barriers and temporarily stops regeneration.
- Root attacks have a visible wind-up.
- Attacking with several roots at once exposes its golden core.

Signature move

Forest Lock. Roots erupt around a selected area, trapping grounded enemies for a short time.

Favorable matchup: PRISMOR. Roots bypass its reflective shield and restrict dodging.

Counter to watch: KORVAK.

PRISMOR

The Mirror Gladiator

Visual identity: A cobalt and iridescent crystal fighter with three arms, two powerful legs, a vertical glowing face slit, and a round prism shield.

Combat role: Agile melee fighter and trickster.

Strengths

- Quick dodges and strong melee combinations.
- A precisely timed directional shield block reflects energy projectiles.
- Can create a short-lived visual decoy.

Weaknesses

- Moderate health; its shield protects only the front and consumes energy.
- Cannot reflect physical strikes, roots, shockwaves, or water streams.
- Missed heavy punches leave it exposed.

Signature move

Prism Reversal. Briefly raises its shield. A successful energy reflection powers up its next punch.

Favorable matchup: VELUMORA. Well-timed blocks send lightning back at the flyer.

Counter to watch: CANOPYX.

Matchups and game balance

Each monster has one intended favorable matchup and one main counter. Other interactions still matter: Oruvex can force Velumora to land, for example, even though Velumora has the favorable overall matchup.

Favorable matchups

Monster	Favored opponent	Reason
KORVAK	CANOPYX	Heat burns its defenses and interrupts healing.
VELUMORA	ORUVEX	Electricity exploits its exposed pressure sacs.
ORUVEX	KORVAK	Water weakens its armor and stops its charges.
CANOPYX	PRISMOR	Roots bypass its reflective shield and restrict dodging.
PRISMOR	VELUMORA	Well-timed blocks send lightning back at the flyer.

Rules for fair battles

Keep matchups winnable. Treat favorable matchups as advantages rather than automatic victories. Timing, movement, and resource management should let a skilled player win with any monster.

Make powerful attacks readable. Give each powerful attack a visible warning and a short recovery window. Opponents should have a chance to dodge, interrupt, or punish it.

Make resources visible. Clearly show flight stamina, water reserves, shield energy, and regeneration status. Players should understand why an ability is temporarily unavailable.

Tune after playtesting. Adjust health, damage, movement speed, ability duration, and cooldowns after testing. Check that one monster or one repeatable attack does not dominate every battle.
